Angelina Seah is a Senior Consultant and is currently based at Cognitive Edge's headquarters in Singapore.

Angelina works closely with clients on project design, signifier creation and data analysis using the SenseMaker® software and Cognitive Edge proprietary sensemaking methods. Her projects address complex organizational challenges such as strategic planning, employee engagement and obtaining customer/community insight. Angelina has extensive experience working with government as well as corporate organizations across diverse fields such as defence, education, business and non-profit work.

Angelina's white paper on the use of narrative research in dealing with the challenges of employee engagement is available here.

In addition to consulting, Angelina is also a trainer on the use of SenseMaker® software as well as the Cognitive Edge sensemaking methods.

Outside of work, Angelina enjoys sports, volunteering with a local women's non-profit organization and travel. Angelina is the Connections chairperson for Swarthmore alumni in Singapore. She is also a qualified ashtanga vinyasa yoga teacher and studies regularly with Paul Dallaghan of Centered Yoga.

Before joining Cognitive Edge, Angelina was a Foreign Service Officer with the Singapore Ministry of Foreign Affairs where she focused on policy review and political analysis of international developments. Angelina graduated with High Honours in Sociology/Anthropology from Swarthmore College in the United States, with minors in Japanese and Religion.
